Officers of the Haliburton Highlands Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, and the Ministry of Natural Resources will be attending the annual Kids 'n' Cops fishing day on Wednesday, July 4 at 9:30 a.m. at Head Lake Park in Haliburton.

Kids 'n' Cops fishing is an opportunity for selected local children's groups to come out and try fishing with the assistance of community volunteers from the Haliburton Highlands Stewardship Council, the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association, Kinark Outdoor Centre, MNR Enforcement and Fire Management Teams and the OPP.

Cops 'n' Kids fishing is a grassroots program that was implemented by the Police Association of Ontario, Bob Izumi, the Canadian Tire Corporation and Fishing Forever.

This program encourages youngsters to go fishing, and provides them with that opportunity.

West Guilford celebrates

Darren Lum Staff reporter

While wiping away tears, Marjorie Nicholls, 75, struggled to find the words to articulate the honour of being named this year's West Guilford Citizen of the Year.

Better known as Marj, she has lived in West Guilford for more than 50 years and is a humble person who cares for everyone in her community. It's not a shock to get a consoling word or two from Nicholls over the phone when you're sick.

"It's just the way it is here. You do things. I catered at one time [Canada Day] so it's just when you cook you just cook for people. It's an honour. My God I didn't know what was happening," she

It was special, she said, having her name added to an elite group that includes recent recipient Kay Morrison, who won the Pioneer Heritage Carol Stamp Citizen Award for Service to the Community last year and presented it to a teary Nicholls.

Å dedicated West Guilford citizen, Nicholls was born in Minden and is the oldest daughter of Cecil and Hattie Stamp. She did whatever needed to be done for the small one gas station and one shopping centre community. She is a regular contributor of food to a variety of functions and events from funerals to birthdays and everything in between.

The mother of five – in order of age and the alphabet: Alberta, Bernie (former NHLer and who will bring the Stanley Cup next month), Cheryl, David and Erin, grandmother to 11 and great grandmother to seven – covered her eyes and did everything to shed the limelight. She didn't have a chance, as the applause, like the sun, washed over her "Guilford is just the best spot, I'm telling you. Everybody is so caring," she said. "It's just a great community. Everybody is so caring. I don't know what can I say?" she said. "The people. You know your neighbours. You know everyone in this community. It's not like the city where you don't even know your neighbour. If anything happens they're right there. I've lost five brothers and sisters. The caring and support is so good here."

With the exception of Alberta Upton, her oldest daughter in Scarborough, all her children was there. When the competitions were judged and completed Nicholls also took "best pie" out of 19 entries for her raspberry pie.

A fitting ending for a woman who is not shy about being sweet on the place she calls home.

BIA to move forward with expansion

Angelica Blenich

Staff reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the June 25 meeting of Dysart et al council.

The Haliburton Business Improvement Area has been given council's blessing to expand the boundaries of their organiza-

Representing the BIA were chairman Luke Schell and vice-chairman Andy Glecoff, who made a delegation to council with proposed plans of extending boundaries to include businesses beyond Highland

Over the past number of months the BIA has approached businesses within the proposed boundaries in writing outlining the organization's intention to expand, said

The response has been overwhelming positive, with 89 per cent of affected businesses in favour, said Glecoff.

The new boundaries would encompass the downtown core, extending to Maple Avenue, Sunnyside Street, Pine Avenue, Mountain Avenue and Cedar Avenue.

At this point the expansion would include 18 new businesses.

Council said they were in support of the plans and hoped to have the changes included in the 2013 budget.

Harcourt playground to be removed

The playground located at the Harcourt Community Centre has failed a recent safety inspection and therefore will be removed.

News of the inspection was delivered by parks and recreation director Ray Miscio, who told council the department was requested to inspect the playground equipment due to reported safety concerns.

The director visited the site twice and was accompanied by a seasonal staff member certified in playground inspection.

Some of the safety concerns include improper chains on the swings, chunks of asphalt under a swing, missing pieces such as handles and railings, sharp and broken edges and improper baby seats on the Miscio expects it will cost about $15,000 to replace the equipment and he will be applying for grant funding to cover some if not all of the cost.

Haliburton Museum to get new roof

The Haliburton Museum will be paying for a new roof to the tune of $30,510.

Currently the museum has its original roof in place, which was repaired about 15 years ago by Haliburton Roofing, according to a report from chief executive officer Tamara Wilbee.

Due to age, the roof has acquired a leak that has deteriorated quickly and is in need of a complete replacement based on a recent assessment, according to Wilbee.

"Due to the need to undertake this work immediately to reduce the risk of any further property damage, we have contracted with Haliburton Roofing to replace the entire flat roof and its various components," wrote the CAO in her report.

Since the item is not budgeted, the CAO recommended council transfer the funds from reserves.

Council approved the transfer of funds.

Fire department to begin safety campaign

The Dysart fire department will soon be kicking off their annual safety campaign, checking for smoke alarms in homes, cottages, bunkies and trailers.

During the campaign the department will be on the lookout for missing or dismantled smoke alarms, the condition and age of alarms and battery condition.

They will also be checking carbon monoxide alarms and extinguishers.

The campaign will include educating seasonal and non-seasonal residents on the importance of a carbon monoxide alarm and extinguishers in cottage country.

Kids these days

Jenn Watt

Editor

TIDS THESE DAYS. Most of us are guilty of uttering that phrase at least once or twice.

When we were growing up, adults didn't understand us and now that we're adults we just don't understand what the kids are thinking.

We know it's wrong to lump them all together, but every once in a while that phrase just squeaks out, usually to decry some injustice done.

But perhaps it could come to represent something positive.

Last week, I had the chance to sit in on a couple of elementary school graduations in the county and the dreams of our local students were pleasantly whimsical and refreshing.

At J.D. Hodgson Elementary School, teacher Carolyn Lewis read out the favourite memories and future goals of the students as they crossed the floor to graduate Grade 8.

While some contained the slapstick exploits of being a kid, others were sage and worldly.

What was most striking was the mixture of uncomplicated dreams and unfettered drive to achieve.

"Brenna has many future goals," Lewis read out about Brenna Hie. "She would like to be an artist, vet tech, author, teacher [and] photographer. There are so many things she wants to do in her life. She wants to climb Mount Everest, go to California, have a party in the middle of the woods and grow out her hair. She wants to live life as it was meant to be lived: to the fullest."

Jordan Miscio has his sights set on seeing the world.

'Something that Jordan would like to do more of is to travel. He really enjoys seeing things that he has never seen before in the world. He feels that there is so much out there and most people really only get to see very little of it," Lewis

And then there was Chris McKee, who reminisced about a particularly special moment: "Chris's favourite memory of JDH was the assembly in which all the Grade 8s did a flash mob [dance]. The performance was in celebration of Ms. [Traci] Hubbert and Chris thought it was cool to see how many people cared that the principal was leaving and that the dance they put on showed their respect for her."

Those are just three of dozens of incredibly thoughtful, ambitious and compassionate messages students chose to have read aloud during last week's ceremony.

Others included becoming a doctor in developing countries, playing hockey on the Canadian women's Olympic team and helping children with special needs.

Kids these days, huh?

Eat the seasons

T THIS TIME of year it is so much fun to anticipate and enjoy the foods that come into season. Nothing tastes as good as fresh produce at their peak.

Not only does seasonal food taste good, and have high nutritional value, but there are many other reasons to support this action.

When we eat what is in season it reduces the energy needed to transport food. It supports the local economy and eating seasonally connects with the earth's natural rhythm.

And seasonal food is fresher and tends to be tastier and more nutritious. My husband is a garlic farmer and grows more than 1,000 bulbs every year. Each year at the end of June, little curly shoots (garlic scapes) come sprouting out of the top of our garlic. Garlic scapes are the flowers of the garlic plant, which grow as a curly whimsical stalk and are absolutely beautiful. The garlic scapes are really a gardener's secret - they need to be removed early from the plants in order for the plant to concentrate its energy on growing the bulb and not the flowers and as an added benefit you can cook it and it tastes absolutely delicious!

As far as health benefits go, garlic scapes have many of the same super health-promoting properties that garlic cloves contain. They contain manganese, which keeps your bones strong and healthy and protect cells from free radical damage; vitamin B6 to support your nervous system: vitamin C to boost your immune system and improve iron absorption; and selenium to reduce joint inflammation. Scapes have a texture somewhere between a green bean and an asparagus stalk, with a beautiful mild garlic flavour when cooked. They can be eaten raw in pesto, or sautéed for the top of meat or pasta. Scape pesto also makes a great sauce for the base of a pizza! The season for garlic scapes is really short; they are ready now and some are already done. If you are looking for fresh scapes a great place to check out is the farmers' market in Carnarvon! Here is a yummy scape recipe that our family loves.

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. 2. Toss scapes with grape seed oil and sprinkle with salt. Roast in the oven for about 30 minutes until they begin to carmelize. 3. Place roasted scapes, sundried tomatoes, feta, walnuts and red pepper flakes into a food processor. Pulse until combined but not puréed. Fold into softened cream cheese. Loafing around

'M NOT ONE TO LOOK a gift horse in the mouth, but the truth is I didn't need instruction - despite what the woman at the grocery store thought.

"Sir," she said, "have you ever used an automatic bread slicer

It was like asking Wayne Gretzky if he had ever used a hockey stick - I mean, aside from the fact that he would have said yes. 'How hard can it be?" I asked.

She then pointed to the accompanying instructions and demonstrated how the machine worked on an unsliced loaf I had pulled off the shelf. When she left, it was cut into many perfect, half-inch slices and bagged effortlessly. I rolled my eyes, as men of questionable mechanical aptitude have done since time immemorial when confronted with anything remotely resembling assistance. "Like I needed help," I muttered, as that woman walked away.

"Huh?" Jenn said.

"Who needs instructions to slice bread?'

"I bet you'll mess it up, first loaf you try," she said.

Like most women, she hadn't banked on the fact that we men instinctively understand any power tool that uses circular blades or helps make sandwiches. In fact, ever since the first caveman sharpened a throwing axe, we've known that it isn't healthy to try to catch one. Although, to be honest, it probably took us several bad experiences before this registered.

The point was she had thrown down the gauntlet and we men had learned plenty since then. Besides, she had not just doubted me, but also man's natural ability to ignore important instructions. I knew something must be done.

So the next time we were in that grocery store, I very subtly eased us towards a rematch.

Do we need bread? Huh? Huh? Huh?" I yelped.

"Sure," she said, "but I don't see that helpful woman around so we should probably wait before getting it sliced." "You don't trust me to do it?" I asked.

Steve Galea

Loon Tales

"No," she said. "You don't do very well around things that spin quickly or should I remind you about the time you tried to show our dogs how to catch Frisbees?"

"The dentist said it could happen to anyone," I snapped.

"Not on the second visit!" she reminded.

Despite this, I pulled a likely loaf of unsliced bread from the shelf and began that historic, long march towards freedom from

As I walked towards that gleaming bread slicer while humming We Shall Overcome several downtrodden brothers watched me from adjoining aisles and the meat section. And I knew that for this moment in history, I and I alone carried the hopes and dreams of my kind. I would have smiled but my teeth still ached a bit. As I walked past the discount barbecue sauces with loaf in hand, one old man whispered, "Show them we can do it ... Show them we don't need to listen or read manuals ... Then he raised a four-fingered fist in solidarity. Soon, I stood in front of the bread-slicing beast. "I have come here," I declared, "to slice bread like a free man – without fear of instruction or demonstration on how to do it correctly!"

Then, as Jenn looked on nervously and my brothers held their breath, I did what has come naturally to my kind ever since the first set of instructions was carved into a stone tablet. Yes, I ignored them completely.

Bread was installed; buttons pushed; blades whirred and gears ratcheted that loaf inexorably onward towards the historic conclusion.

Between you and me, next time I'm getting the pre-sliced.

Protecting our loons | The old maple tree

To the Editor.

We read a concern expressed in last week's Echo voiced by the Kashawigamog cottagers' group reflecting an observation about the apparent lack of successful loon hatchings. We live on Pine Lake and this year observed the second hatching in 13 years on this lake. Although we have watched the loons nesting annually in the same area on a nearby point, most attempts end up in failure. The Pine Lake problem is obvious.

Typically the loons nest close to the water's edge in longer grass (watching loons walk on land is painful to see). We have observed this habit every spring as they go about preparing the nest and eventually laying an egg. The mother loon is a fastidious parent sitting for days on the nest. And then, someone decides that the downstream water levels are in need of boosting and two logs are removed from the dams on Redstone and Eagle Lake. It is necessary apparently, to always remove two logs. Pine Lake becomes flooded, including the loon nest and that is the end of that year's nesting.

We read and hear a lot of jabber about the need to protect our natural habitat and our disappearing wildlife. It is particularly ironic then to realize that the greatest and perhaps the only threat to Pine Lake's loon population is entirely man-made resulting from a need to satiate the Trent Canal's sudden appetite for their local water levels.

Response to Marilyn Frost's letter to the editor June

Yes, it's truly unfortunate about the maple tree in front of the historical Lucas house. First it was the Lucas barn, now the maple tree. If that tree could talk, it would have some stories to tell!

While looking at historical pictures, there used to be a horse race track in behind. Yes, I'm sure that old maple tree has some yarns to weave!

The road is named maple street. I'm not certain but I'm guessing it's because of all the old maple trees that once adorned that roadway.

Well, the barn was the first to go, now the tree. I'm surmising it'll be the old historical Lucas house waiting for the chopping block.

I can only hope that the tree went to a sawmill to become something of use.

Clarke, 47, has been a designer for the past 17 years, working primarily in Toronto.

Since bringing her business to the Highlands, has transformed spaces by incorporating a sense of style and functionality to projects she works on.

"They say 10 per cent of your budget should be for interior decorating but that it makes 90 per cent of the impact," said Clarke.

From picking out flooring and wall colours, to selecting throw pillows and conceptualizing floor plans, Clarke can look at a home or business and create a vision.

Politicians get prescription for physician recruitment

Chad Ingram

Staff reporter

County councillors got some advice on doctor recruitment last week.

Jim Pine, chief administrative officer for Hastings County, visited councillors at their June 27 meeting.

Hastings County's physician recruitment program has brought 12 practitioners to that municipality in the last six years.

Haliburton County's recruitment efforts have recruited none.

The Hastings program offers med school students a grant of $150,000 over six years on the condition that once they earn their licence, they practise a minimum of five years somewhere within the county, which borders Haliburton to the east.

The program started in 2006.

At that time, 20,000 of the county's 50,000 residents were without access to a family

"It's not a traditional business that we're in," Pine said, but added that politicians were getting constant calls about the lack of medical service and that a shortage of doctors was inhibiting the community's ability to attract new businesses. "It was becoming an economic development issue for us."

So the township devised a plan.

Pine said one of the first hurdles was discarding the feeling that rural communities were unattractive destinations for medical professionals.

"That's one of the biggest things wrong with our thinking," he said.

Hastings councillors also agreed they would not poach doctors from other areas and Pine said that total agreement on the plan was a necessity.

"Everyone around the table has to agree and stick to it," he said.

Hastings decided to focus on medical students, from first-years to resi-

"Money talks, if I can be so blunt," Pine said. "It's important to them."

In return, the doctors sign contracts to practise a minimum of five years within the municipality.

"Of course, we hope they stay forever," Pine said.

It looks like that might the case for a lot of Hastings recruits, many of whom were professionals of one sort or another who turned to medicine as a second career.

Hawks celebrate end of high school career

What does it mean to be a Red Hawk? For the 2012 graduating students at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School being a hawk is all about being a friend.

That was the message delivered by this year's Grade 12 valedictorian Loretta Kerr and a feeling that was palpable throughout the school's athletic complex during the commencement ceremony on June

The evening marked the end of four years of high school for the 126 students who received their diplomas.

'No more listening to announcements, no more attendance checks at the door," said vice-principal Irv Sternberg, the news of which was met with cheers from the graduates.

Sternberg encouraged the students to continue staying connected with one another and maintain the friendships they had made over the years.

Trillium Lakelands District School Board trustee and former HHSS principal Gary Brohman advised students to find love in the work they do, no matter what "Life isn't sexy, it's hard work," he said. Principal Dan Marsden encouraged the students to begin a lifelong journey of learning and to stay young in their hearts.

During her valedictorian address, Kerr examined the famous phrase "once a hawk, always a hawk," made popular by Brohman during his tenure at the school.

"Have you ever thought about what that actually means?" asked Kerr.

The valedictorian believed that being a hawk was all about being a friendly person, a trait that makes HHSS unique amongst the schools in TLDSB.

Reminiscing about her four years at the high school, Kerr said it wasn't until she visited other schools that she realized HHSS was comprised of warm, friendly students

"I thought everyone was as nice as a red hawk, but I soon realized they're not," said Kerr.

The resilience shown by students at their recent prom, which was dampened by rainy weather, was just one example of how much fun and spunk red hawks have.

They support each other and are genuine, kind people, said Kerr.

"I can honestly say we have the best school in Trillium Lakelands District School Board. I'm positive about that," she said.

It's because of this the four years of high school will be remembered as wonderful years of their lives, said Kerr. "Once a hawk, always a hawk."

They might only be 13 years old, but students at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School have some big dreams.

As they crossed the auditorium floor June 26 to receive their diplomas, the Grade 8 students' favourite memories and aspirations were read aloud by teacher Carolyn Lewis.

One girl wanted to get her PhD and build hospitals in developing countries.

Another wanted to fly an airplane.

Two students aspired to play women's hockey in the Olympics, while two dreamed of dirt bike racing.

Parents, siblings, grandparents and friends craned their necks and shoved digital cameras into the air hoping for a photo to capture a milestone in their children's lives as they move on to high school.

School board trustee Gary Brohman offered unique perspective on that journey as the former principal of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

'There's nothing to be afraid of," he said, encouraging everyone to get involved whether it be in athletics, arts or academic endeavours.

Valedictorian Brynn Meyers told the audience that the students are indeed nervous about the next big step, but she offered some perspective.

J.D. Hodgson Elementary School was confusing when they first arrived, she said, but they ended up having good

The grads are excited about moving on to a bigger place with more freedom and opportunity, Brynn said, including meeting new people and eating in the cafeteria instead of at their desks in the classroom.

Principal Elaine Fournier rounded off the evening by telling parents she shared their "deep pride and joy" in the students' success.

While the students were graduating from JDHES, she said, it is also a new, exciting, beginning.

Grade 8 graduate Brynn Meyers gives the valedictorian address to a full gymnasium at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School. Brynn reminisced about good times and bad at the school and told the audience the students were looking forward to increased freedom and opportunity at high school.

Conspiracy coming to Haliburton Sculpture Forest

On Monday, July 9 at 4:30 p.m. the Haliburton Sculpture Forest will be celebrating the installation of a new sculpture titled "A Conspiracy of Ravens" created by Canadian artist John McKinnon.

The public is invited to a reception in the Sculpture Forest and the unveiling of the sculpture.

This event will be followed a talk by the artist about his work and the creation of the "conspiracy" in the Great Hall of the Haliburton campus of Fleming College.

The commissioning and installation of "A Conspiracy of Ravens" has been made possible through a generous donation from Noreen Blake, who has been spending her summers in the Haliburton area with her family for over 60 years.

Blake has always taken an interest in the art scene in the Highlands and for a number of years served as a tour guide for the Sculpture Forest.

Volunteers thanked at general meeting

Chad Ingram

Staff reporter

If Community Care Haliburton County was to pay all its volunteers minimum wage for the work they do, it would cost the organization $250,000 a year.

Luckily for the organization's clients, these folks give their time out of the goodness of their hearts.

Volunteers were thanked at Community Care's annual general meeting at the Stanhope Firefighters Community Centre on June 27.

"People reach their medical appointments, people get their meals," said Brigitte Gebauer. "Our volunteers do all of this with a smile and genuine concern."

This year's Volunteer of the Year was Frank Thom, who, along with performing regular volunteer duties, acts as the organization's PR man, contributing to its newsletter and photographs its events.

"I do this because I enjoy doing it and I like all the people," Thom said as he accepted his gift.

Volunteers put in an average of 180 hours a year. 2012 is a year of change for Community Care.

The Central East Ontario Local Health Integration Network (LHIN) recently announced the creation of the Haliburton County Integration Planning Team, which will bring together healthcare providers in the area including Community Care, Haliburton Highlands Health Services, SIRCH Community Services, the Central East Community Care Access Centre and the Haliburton Highlands Family Health Team.

Just how this integrated service model will work is not yet clear.

"If we're not happy, we should stand up and say something about it," said outgoing board member Dick Charron, who received a certificate of appreciation from board president Jeanne Anthon.

Charron, who is moving out of the area, will continue with the organization in an advisory role.

Outgoing director Roxanne Casey was also thanked for her years of service.

"Always, always remember clients first," Casey said as she accepted her certificate.

Board member Gerald Rome was honoured for his 20 years of activity and said he watched the organization grow substantially in that time.

"The people in the county really know who we are now,"

New board members were appointed and a motion was passed to increase the size of the board to a minimum of 11 and maximum of 15 members.

There are currently 12 directors on the board.

Executive director Maureen Trimble thanked staff members and Hank DeBruin and Tanya McCready-DeBruin were the guest speakers for the afternoon, talking about their experience at the Iditarod.

Health critic MP visits Haliburton

Hedy Fry wants to see a revolution take place in Canada.

A Liberal member of Parliament for Vancouver Centre, Fry visited Haliburton on June 25 with an impassioned speech.

"I'm not going to sell you a bill of goods," Fry said during her informal talk held at Pinestone Resort.

First elected into the House of Commons in 1993, Fry has seen many leaders at the helm of Canada, now under Conservative Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

"We are at a precarious time," she said.

Born in Trinidad and Tobago, Fry, 70, immigrated to Canada after medical training at the Royal College of Surgeons in Ire-

Canada offered a diverse, accepting culture that allowed you to be yourself. Even though it was a small country it had an impact on the world, said Fry.

"We were the little nation that could." But this has changed, she said.

"We are no longer the peacemakers. We've become a distinct nation ... I no longer want to be considered a Canadian," she said.

Growing up, Fry lived in social housing with parents who saved their money to buy a home, only to forfeit their savings for their daughter's education.

The MP studied hard and worked towards making a better life for herself, seeing opportunities in both Europe and Canada.

A fan ofs Pierre Elliot Trudeau, Fry believed the former prime minister had a vision for a just society and she wanted to be a part of that.

"I came to Canada because I believed no one should have to make the choice between a roof over their head and their child's education," she said.

A Liberal politician for the past 20 years, Fry believes the party is not so much a family but rather a movement.

Under a Liberal government achievements, such as the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms have happened, said

These days Canada is under a right-

Ashamed of Canada on the international stage, the MP pointed to recent changes to employment insurance as just one example of developments that are hurting Can-

Fry has also witnessed changes to the Environmental Protection Act, with the current government reducing its budget

Comparing the actions to a developing nation, the MP believed Canada was taking many steps backwards.

"I watch everything we've built be gutted ... unravel beneath us."

Perhaps most frustrating is Fry's belief that Canada is no longer a democratic nation, as the opportunity to challenge the current majority government seems to be vanishing.

"I watch Conservative MPs high-five each other in the House of Commons. Never before has a government been this arrogant, even under Brian Mulroney."

While many Canadians are trying to make ends meet during a time when the economy is down, the government is counting on the public's lack of attention, said Fry.

Wanting to see a progressive movement take shape, the MP encouraged those in attendance to hold their local MP account-

"It's time for us Canadians to stand up and take back our country."

Rotary Club continues to support Incubator program

For the second year in a row the Haliburton Rotary Club is showing it believes in the Haliburton Creative Business Incubator.

The club supported the program by being its platinum sponsor for the 2012/2013 year, donating $4,500 to the Incubator.

Through the Haliburton County Development Corporation, the HCBI program develops local entrepreneurs and businesses throughout the Highlands through mentoring initiatives.

It is this investment in the future of Haliburton County that the Rotary Club believes in, according to Mike Jaycock, manager of the HCBI.

Members like George Kadoke and Hugh Nichol have even dedicated their time to the program by becoming mentors to those currently working out of the Incubator.

"If we can give good advice at the right time, it can make a world of difference to a business person who is working alone, working so very hard to get to the next level," said Nichol in a press release.

Province downloads water source protection

Chad Ingram Staff reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the June 27 meeting of County Council

Planner Jane Tousaw told councillors the province is backing away from the water source protection process it has been implementing over the past few years and on which it has spent millions of dollars.

"The municipal working group was really alarmed," Tousaw told councillors. The process has involved ongoing consultation with municipal representatives from throughout the province.

It appears that the cost for implementation of source protection programming could fall to local conservation authorities and governments.

Tousaw said chairpersons from the municipal working group will be meeting with representatives of the Ministry of Environment to discuss the issue.

County says no to rental supplement. social services van program

Councillors rebuffed a request from the Kawartha Lakes Haliburton Housing Corporation to provide rental supplements on 12 units in the affordable housing complex to be constructed on County Road 21 for a cost of $24,000 for 2013 and for two units at 19 Higgins Court at $14,000.

"This, to me, is a 30-year commitment that goes up with inflation," said Dysart et al Reeve and County Warden Murray Fearrey, adding that it hadn't been made clear from the beginning the county would be expected to provide rental supplements on the County Road 21 building.

The county has already put $190,000 into

'Ŵhat CKL isn't saying is they get money from the province, but they've used it all in the City of Kawartha Lakes," said Minden Hills Reeve Barb Reid.

Councillors also turned down a request to look at purchasing new social services

A van, initially funded through Ontario Works, that was used by the county and the City of Kawartha Lakes for years is no longer available.

Kawartha Lakes phased out its use of the van and Ontario Ŵorks is no longer funding the project.

The costs, which a staff report said were not included in the county budget, would be $50,000 for a new van and an estimated $35,000 a year for operating costs.

No thanks on TSW study

Councillors voted against participating in an economic impact study with the City of Kawartha Lakes, Trent Hills and the City of Quinte West on the changes to the Trent Severn Waterway after receiving a letter from the mayors of those three communi-

The leaders were also looking for a financial contribution to the study of up to

While Haliburton County contains feeder lakes for the canal, county political representatives have not been invited to recent stakeholder meetings on the upcoming operation changes to the canal.

"I'm not sure what we hope to get out this." Fearrey said.

Algonquin Highlands Reeve Carol Moffatt reiterated that the county had largely been left out of the consultation process so

"They don't know we exist . . . they don't care that we exist," she said.

County accepts initial report on new EMS base/fire hall

Councillors received a report from architect Ron Awde on the proposed joint EMS base/ fire hall between Haliburton County and Minden Hills to be constructed on the old Walker's Auto Repair property on Highway 35 in Minden.

The report contained a number of options for the location of the building, which would be constructed on either parts one and two or part three of the divided property, but did provide an indication as to what location would be preferable and what portion of the property would remain for the county to sell.

Minden Hills Reeve Barb Reid said she wasn't convinced the report was acceptable until it contained that information.

"What can we sell?" Reid asked.

Chief administrative officer Jim Wilson said that hydro-geological and geo-technical studies the county and Minden Hills are undertaking on the property would provide the answer to that.

The Ministry of Environment has granted permission for water and sewer conduits to be extended to the site.

The building will be using the Minden Hills system.

EMS goes paperless

The county's EMS department has gone

As of Wednesday morning, the department was using a digital reporting system, which director Pat Kennedy said would dramatically improve efficiency.

It is also converting to a new ambulance data system, with county councillors approving an agreement with the Ministry of Health and Long Term Care.

"It's supposed to go live within the next few weeks," Kennedy said, adding the new technology would track ambulance activity more accurately.

Under the old system, 80 calls missed being counted in the first four months of

The change won't cost the county anything.

More news from Kennedy was that the county finally received notification from the province that it will be maintaining 50 per cent funding of the county's land ambulance costs for 2012.

The county has been waiting for that announcement for months.

County demography will continue to age

Planner Jane Tousaw told councillors that projections are Haliburton County's population will hit 20,000 in 2031, following a one per cent growth trend.

It is also expected that the number of senior citizens will increase by 83 per cent in that time.

"That will create challenges for serving the municipalities," Tousaw said.

Fearrey, who sources agree is no spring chicken, quipped that she would have to update him in the afterlife.

Well water samples should be tested at least three times a year: health unit

Valerie Macdonald

QMI Agency

At least three times every year, including springtime in particular, well owners should test their well water for bacteria, according to provincial data supplied by the local health unit.

A recent change in the reporting required is to record the time of day the well sample is taken.

Samples should also be taken if there is a change in the water's taste, odour or colour, after significant plumbing work, or if problems are suspected.

Free water testing bottles are available at the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit and samples are transported daily from the health unit (Monday through Friday by 10:30 a.m.) to the provincial laboratory in Peterborough for testing.

Testing is done to measure the ongoing safety of your water, states health unit literature, and is not a substitute for medical evaluations if you are sick or for fixing a faulty

"The sample will not be tested if the [accompanying] data sheet is not filled in ... and will not be tested if it is more than 48 hours old," the literature also advises.

The results of testing at the lab can be obtained over the telephone after three business days using identification from a bar code on your plastic test bottle or by choosing to have the results mailed to you.

The results are not obtained from the local health unit but it is made aware if there are drinking water problems within its jurisdiction.

Adult education class celebrates graduation

McKecks hosts group of grads who beat the odds to get their high school diplomas

On Tuesday, June 26, 21 graduates of the Haliburton Adult Education and Training Centre crossed the restaurant floor at McKecks restaurant to receive their Ontario Secondary School Diploma (OSSD).

For the past several years the Haliburton AETC has operated out of the old Victoria School in the Haliburton Village.

Recently, this building has been declared "prohibitive to repair" and placed on the real estate market.

The school will be moving to the former Haliburton board office on the Haliburton family of schools campus.

School and board staff are busy making preparations for the move, which is slated to take place as early as this coming September.

"I am confident that the move to a new location will work well for our students and our staff," stated director of education, Larry Hope.

"There will be a few details that will need to be ironed out, as there always are when there is a move. The school has a small student population which allows for a familytype atmosphere - and like a family, I know they will all work together to ensure that the transfer operates as smoothly as possible."

Many graduations have been taking

I am always so pleased when I hear about our AETC graduates.

— Board chairwoman Karen Round

place across Trillium Lakelands District School Board this week - from Grade 6 students moving to Central Senior in Lindsay, Grade 8 students graduating to start high school, to hundreds of youth finishing secondary school to embark on their next adventure into the world of work or postsecondary education.

All these ceremonies are heart-warming and fill students, parents, and staff alike with a huge sense of accomplishment and

The school board runs six alternative education schools (called AETCs) throughout the district. Each AETC has held graduations this year with over 200 students receiving their OSSD across the district.

These graduates hold a soft spot in the hearts of educators.

These students have risen above the odds and worked in spite of often numerous challenges to accomplish their goal -

"We are incredibly proud of all our graduates," said school board chairwoman Karen Round.

"I am always so pleased when I hear about our AETC graduates. I know many of them have had huge obstacles to overcome. Their perseverance and hard work to accomplish their OSSD will put them in good stead for their future careers."

Meet the graduates

Haliburton AETC valedictorian Chris Anderson graduated from the centre after five years.

Anderson came to the school after he had injured his shoulder, bringing his carpentry job to a halt.

He had been working in the carpentry industry since he was 15 years old and did not complete his secondary school educa-

This summer Anderson plans to get his AZ licence through a six-week course.

Anderson was anxious for the ceremony to commence, anticipating the speech he was about to give, but his nerves didn't get the best of him.

The audience was captivated by his heartfelt words and humour.

Anderson was also the recipient of the Principal's Award.

Jeremy Hewson decided to go back to school to earn his OSSD after years of working two, even three jobs, and realized that "you cannot find good employment without Grade 12."

After two years at the Haliburton AETC, Jeremy's goal is to continue his education in the PSW program and work for Commu-

Hewson is feeling good about earning his OSSD.

After he finished his final class earlier in the day, he took his son to a teddy bear picnic then rushed back to McKecks for his graduation ceremony.

Gravenhurst AETC graduate Alyssa Sommerville returned for the ceremony in Haliburton where she started her journey, to graduate with her friends.

Sommerville has sent in her application to Georgian College for a fall start in nurs-

After four years at the Haliburton AETC and recently the Gravenhurst AETC, and working every minute of her spare time, Sommerville says "it took a while" but she's very excited" to be graduating.

Ashley Mann graduates after two years at the Haliburton AETC and is grateful for the accommodating schedules the AETCs

She is excited to be graduating, and plans to go to college in the future for PSW, but right now she is more excited to be a mom to her two-month-old son.

Tim Hortons proposes new site design to council

Angelica Blenich

Staff reporter

In an effort to meet municipal regulations at a lower cost, Tim Hortons is pitching a new site design for a proposed restaurant on County Road 21.

During a delegation to council at their June 25 meeting, Tim Hortons representatives Leo Palozzi and Joe Kappel discussed issues with the previous draft site design, including a required setback that would cost the corporation hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"We're not willing to do this," said Pal-

Instead, the company is suggesting moving the building back, thus reducing the number of parking spots and their size.

The municipal bylaw includes zone provisions to permit the building to be located at 8.3 metres from the front lot line as opposed to the required 13.5 metres and 24 metres from the centre line of County Road 21 as opposed to the required 28.5 metres, according to municipal planner Pat Martin's report.

The municipal bylaw requires there to be 28 parking spaces at the restaurant's location. If changes are approved the new site design would include around 30 spaces.

"We always meet bylaws and usually exceed them," said Palozzi.

According to Palozzi, a large number of Tim Hortons business in the area is drivethrough customers, with about 60 per cent of patrons using the drive-through.

A traffic report conducted by the county says road improvements including road widening, a right-hand turn lane, a lefthand turn lane and paved shoulder, are

The county will be requesting to enter into a site plan agreement with Tim Hortons, which will require the developer pays for the improvements.

An engineer with Tim Hortons, Kappel said he has seen the traffic report conducted by the county and, although he has only looked at it briefly, doesn't agree with many of the items that are required.

"TDL [Tim Hortons] doesn't have a bottomless pit of money," said Kappel.

The corporation has completed its own study and there is a difference between a need and a want, said Kappel.

"There is only so much money TDL is willing to put into a development," he said.

Council gave Palozzi direction to keep the setback relatively the same and reduce the size of the parking spots to 2.75 metres.

A recently leaked transcript from the deputy minister revealed the MNR is planning to become "a smaller organization with fewer people ... operating in fewer places."

The document also references office and facility closures in a move "toward more regional rather than local service delivery."

Scott said the document reiterates what she's already been hearing from the provincial government: major reductions across

"They've overspent and now they're in a bind," said Scott, who is also the Opposition critic for the MNR.

"I would suspect smaller offices would be considered. It's hard because you don't know, really, and staff don't know either. They won't know anything until September," Scott said in an interview.

"I think we're going to have to get ready for that possibility [of office closures]."

In this area, Minden hosts one district MNR office, while Bancroft has another.

The regional office is in Peterborough.

Scott said she hasn't heard much from staff about the employment limbo they've been in for the past several months as the Liberal government debates where cuts

The deputy minister's transcript says the ministry must find savings of $70 million or "10 per cent of our current base budget."

Scott expects some savings will come from outsourcing, which she isn't against.

"We're always concerned that the min-

"If they're going to do ... outsourcing you have to be careful what you're giving away,"

The rest of the savings will come from

"Over the three-year timeframe of our transformation plan, about 550 MNR staff will become eligible to retire," the minister's speech reads.

"We know we will not be able to achieve the necessary reductions through vacancies and retirements alone. Unfortunately, there will be terminations affecting permanent and seasonal staff," it says.

It has been widely speculated that the Stewardship Councils may lose funding for their co-ordinators.

In the transcript, the minister notes there will be a reducing in stewardship funding.

"I think those programs were very good and successful," Scott said.

With minimal expense, Stewardship Council co-ordinators bring together local volunteers to improve the environment and educate the public.

Ultimately, Scott said she agreed that the government has to reduce the deficit, which she pointed out is the third largest budget item for the province.

Andrea Borysiuk's eyes were filled with tears.

When Marie Watson was given the Stuart Baker Elementary School volunteer award in honour of Crystal Bain, emotions ran high.

The award was presented to Watson on June 27 by Bain's children Tannis and Trevin Bain-Gross during the school's final assembly.

Marking the end of her first year as principal at SBES, Borysiuk thanked the many people who make the school function throughout the year.

"We are the envy of the board for the number of volunteers we have," she said.

Trillium Lakelands District School Board trustee Gary Brohman thanked all the volunteers for their time, adding they "make a heck of a difference."

Students opened and closed the assembly with a singing performance.

Turtle centre puts pieces together

Nate Smelle

Special to the Echo

For centuries First Nations people have used turtle shells as calendars following the 13-moon system. During the course of a year, there actually are 13 cycles of the moon each lasting approximately 28 days. The number of segments, or "scoots," on the outer shell of a turtle is 28. This coincides with the number of days in a cycle of the moon. There are also 13 scoots in the inner part of the shell of a turtle representing each one of the 13 moons in a lunar year cycle.

Unlike with the 12 month cycle of the Gregorian calendar that we use today, every moon in the 13-moon system

Dr. Sue Carstairs of the Kawartha Turtle Trauma Centre explains why she finds it so important to protect Ontario's turtles if we are to seriously develop our respect for nature.

"It is not just about loving turtles, it is also about respecting the fragile balance of nature. I want a healthy environment for my children and grandchildren," she said.

"By protecting turtles, we are protecting habitat, and in protecting habitat we are also protecting biodiversity. It is all interconnected."

Like with any charitable organization, their success rate is ultimately dependent upon the kindness and generosity of the volunteers and supporters sharing their time and money with the cause they believe in. The facility is not nearly large enough for the influx of injured turtles needing help. The shelter is now a haven to 138 turtles and hundreds of eggs waiting to hatch.

It is impressive to witness these creatures and their will to live in spite of the severity of their trauma. Turtles have a very similar pain threshold to humans. Some individuals taking shelter at the Kawartha Turtle Trauma Centre have suffered extremely painful, and in most cases life threatening, injuries. Without emergency treatment and rehabilitation facilities like the KTTC, nearly all of these turtles would not survive the onset of infections that would arise without the proper care and sterile conditions necessary for successful rehabilitation.

Although many of the turtles admitted to the facility were hit by accident amidst road and boating traffic, a study conducted in Long Point, Ont. concluded that about 2.7 per cent of turtle strikes are intentional.

In this study researchers placed fake turtles directly in the line of traffic or in the centre of the lane so that the driver would have to either cross the centre line with his or her left tires or enter the shoulder of the road with the right tires to intentionally strike the decoy. On average we are never more than 1.5 kilometres away from a road, and it is perfectly normal for any given species of turtle in Ontario to travel two or three kilometres to a nesting site. To make things even more perilous for turtles 70 per cent of our wetlands in Ontario have already been developed. Luckily, the situation with turtles is not all doom and gloom. Veterinary technician Jackie Carnigie describes her experience of healing turtles as "I can't explain how great it feels when you are able to piece a turtle's shell back together, and then release it back into the wild," she says. "It is beyond words. From my experience of studying and tracking rehabilitated and released turtles out in the field, our work here does make a difference."

In her presentation to the Bancroft Naturalist Club on June 18, Kate Siena, also of the KTTC states how crucial it is for a rehabilitated turtle to return to the ecosystem where it was

"Location is key. When you re-introduce a turtle back into the wild it is essential to the creature's survival that it is returned to the same location where it was found," Siena says.

"The spotted turtle, for instance, is the oldest living turtle in Ontario living as long as 132 years. A mature individual turtle like this contributes to its resident ecosystem in so many ways that if it is removed it can permanently disrupt the health of that ecosystem."

Putting the pieces of this puzzle together it is obvious that the problems causing turtle populations to decline so rapidly after more than 200 million years of successful evolution are of human origin.

Reads of the week

Book of the Week

The Other Daughter by Lisa Gardner

If you enjoyed the dramatic family secrets and tight plot featured in The Accident by Linwood Barclay, then try reading The Other Daughter, one of Lisa Gardner's earliest novels. Twenty years ago, Melanie Stokes was adopted by a wealthy couple after being abandoned in a hospital. She always considered herself very lucky - that is, until a hasbeen reporter starts digging into her past. Melanie has no memory of her life before the adoption but someone wants to give it back, even if it includes digging up the darkest nightmare the Stokes family ever faced: the murder of their first daughter in Texas. As Melanie desperately searches for her real identity, two seemingly unrelated events from the past will come together in a dangerous explosion of truth. How well does Melanie really know her family? Find out by reserving this title today at your branch of the Haliburton County Public Library.

Junior Book of the Week — Young Adult Title

Jellicoe Road by Melina Marchetta

Abandoned by her mother at the age of eleven, Taylor Markham, now seventeen, is at ease in her life as a dorm leader at the boarding school she attends. But when her guardian Hannah suddenly disappears, and a young man from her past re-enters her life, she finds herself forced to confront a history that she thought had been laid to rest. A unique Australian setting, rich characters, beautiful writing, and a complex plot, which is filled with twists that keep readers guessing are just some of the appeals of Melina Marchetta's Jellicoe Road. If you're in the mood for a detailed, brilliantly evocative, tragic and romantic read, reserve Jellicoe Road from Haliburton County Public Library today.

Local Celebrity Read

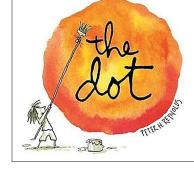

Joanna Coles, the summer children's programming coordinator at the Haliburton County Public Library, is preparing for upcoming story times by rereading The Dot by Peter H. Reynolds. A recent graduate of teachers college, Coles likes to choose books for her students that subtly provide life lessons while still being fun and interesting to look at. "Peter H. Reynolds is an author that accomplishes this very well," says

Coles. "His books are always charming, smartly written and do a great job at promoting creative thinking, original ideas and the importance of expressing oneself."

The Dot follows a frustrated young student named Vashti who exclaims to her teacher, "I just can't draw!" As she stabs an angry dot onto her art paper, her clever teacher shows her how creativity can turn this one lonely dot into something wonderful. "This story teaches us that sometimes it is the smallest of dots that mark the beginning of our greatest accomplishments," says Coles. "Reynold's other book that I would suggest for a similar reason is The Ish. I hope to include these books during some of my story times this summer"

The "summer fun" program begins July 3 and will feature stories, crafts, games and songs for children aged two plus. This program is free and runs throughout the summer. Please check the Haliburton County Public Library website (www.haliburtonlibrary.ca) for further details. "We hope to see lots of kids come out this summer," adds Coles.

Point in Time rec and hub programs in need of financial assistance

Funding is running out. Important programs will be cut. The Summer Adventure Day Camp, the After School Recreation Program and the JDH Neighbourhood Hub are programs made possible by the generous donations or individuals, cottage associations, community organization and businesses.

While many of the services provided by Point in Time Centre for Children, Youth and Parents receive provincial or municipal funding, the recreation and Hub programs are increasingly dependent on the good will and support of the Haliburton County residents.

Marg Cox, executive director, is calling on the community: "Point in Time needs your help. Can your community group or organization hold a fundraiser to support these programs?"

For more information, to make a donation or to request a presentation, please contact Gail Stelter at 705-457-3768 or email gails@pointintime.ca

Support Point in Time programs and services

The JDH Neighbourhood Hub was implemented this year and brought together children and parents with educators, community partners, agencies and expert consultants

The Hub takes place one night each week and is free to all participants who are provided a healthy meal and well-planned parent and child engagement activities.

The JDH Neighbourhood Hub has been instrumental in building community and enriching families. Currently the Hub has received $3,000 from HCDC for next year.

It will cost $12,000 to run the program.

After school recreation programs

School-aged children are provided with supervised active play and nutritional food for two hours after school during the school year.

This is a free recreation program provided once a week at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden and Wilberforce Elementary School in Wilberforce and twice a week at Cardiff Elementary School in Cardiff. In 2011-2012 more than 170 children were registered in the Point in Time After School Recreation Program.

The costs for this program are: $7 per child per week.

Camp Programs

Point in Time provides week-long day camps for children ages six to 11. Summer Adventure Day Camps take place throughout Haliburton County with the location of the camps varying from week to week.

For example, the camp may be in Gooderham one week and in Minden the next.

Well-qualified staff provide excellent programs that are both active and educational.

The nominal fee for this camp can be waived according to individual family circumstances. The costs to parents for this program are $30 per child per week.

The actual costs are, however, much higher due to the additional costs of staffing and overhead expenses.

The Summer Camp Fund is for children who would like to go to camp and would benefit from the opportunity but whose families are not able to afford to send them.

Usually the children attend one week of overnight camp. Occasionally, when parents feel overnight camp is not suitable for their child, one week of day camp is provided.

Over the last 23 years Point in Time has sent over 500 children from Haliburton County to local camps. This year some children will be turned down due to lack of funds.

The costs for this program are: $600 per child per week. Currently there is $3,300 in the Camp Fund. Our goal is to raise $8,000.

Respite services

Point in Time Respite Services are available to the parent of a child, newborn to age 18, who has special needs because of developmental, physical, mental, social, emotional and/or behavioural problems.

Respite can take the form of short-term respite for a few hours a week, overnight respite, weekend respite, summer respite with recreational workers, and one on one workers at local camps.

Respite provides a break for parents and provides a fun and social experience for a child or youth with exceptional needs.

The costs for this program are: $220 per child per week.
